Our valves explained

Exposed valve
Where solid brick walls don't allow a concealed valve or there is a desire to focus more on practicality and function, an exposed valve is often the preferred choice.

Concealed valve
Space-saving or sleekly minimalistic, a concealed valve hidden behind your tiling or wet wall fulfils the desire for a streamlined appearance by masking unattractive pipe work or fittings.

PVD process for bright, shiny and robust surface finishes

More colour in the bathroom: Hansgrohe offer high-tech processes for refining bathroom surface finishes.

hansgrohe bathroom surface finishes refined in the PVD process are vibrant with excellent mechanical properties. The colour is created by adding an additional layer of metal made in vacuum chambers.

Each of the surface finishes are the result of intense product development and a synergy of high tech and hand made, as the brushed effect is created manually. This gives each tap a unique texture based on its design.

The result? Vibrant taps, shower heads and accessories made to the strictest quality standards that fulfil the desire for uniqueness in the bathroom team with a robust resistance to external factors.

PVD coating

A PVD coat is vapour-deposited molecule by molecule in a vacuum coating process, which creates a robust and brilliantly coloured surface

Peace of mind from installation to enjoyment

The quality engineering and attention to detail of every hansgrohe product ensures absolute ease of installation.

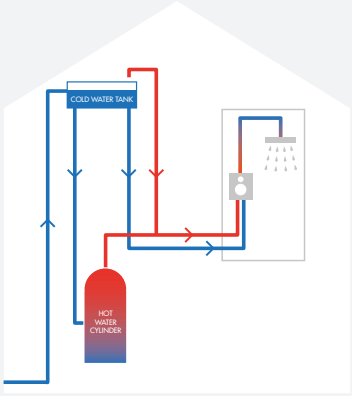
A passion for water and love of innovation means you can trust hansgrohe showering solutions to provide long term performance and durability. Proven over generations, you will have a truly exceptional experience, every time you shower.

Selecting the right products
To discover which showering products will best deliver the exceptional showering experience you seek, it is important to identify correctly the system that is installed in your home. If you are unsure of the system or the water pressure it provides, please consult your professional installer.

Understanding your water system
Identifying the water pressure provided by your plumbing system will allow you to choose a showering product designed to work most efficiently within its parameters. Water pressure is the term used to describe the strength of the water flow through a pipe and is measured in bars.

Installation
Understanding your system's ability to deliver water is essential in order to match your chosen showering solution's performance. A qualified installer will have the knowledge and experience to help you achieve your desired result with the reassurance of exceptional performance in the years ahead.

Service and maintenance
Every hansgrohe product provides the added reassurance of a 5-year quality guarantee with the availability of spare parts also guaranteed for 15 years. All products professionally installed are designed to be serviced if necessary in situ.

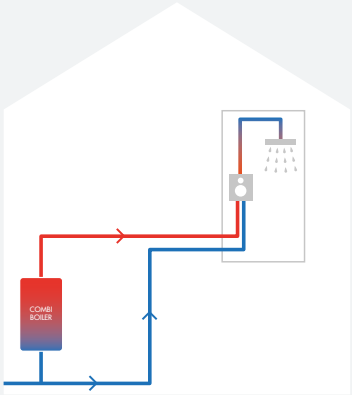


Gravity

Low Pressure - LP (0.2Bar)

- Cold water storage tank in the loft
- Hot water cylinder in property
- No shower pump installed

*All hansgrohe showers in this brochure require a pump if you have this system

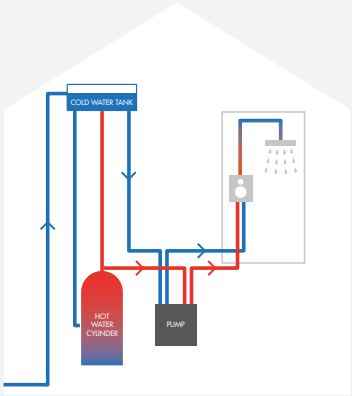


Combination Boiler

Medium Pressure - MP (1Bar - 1.5Bar)*

- Combination boiler fitted providing hot water on demand
- No storage tanks in property
- No shower pump installed

*Pressure is dependent upon the age and size of the combi boiler plus the mains water pressure. A modern 28KW combi boiler will typically provide between 1Bar - 1.5Bar pressure.



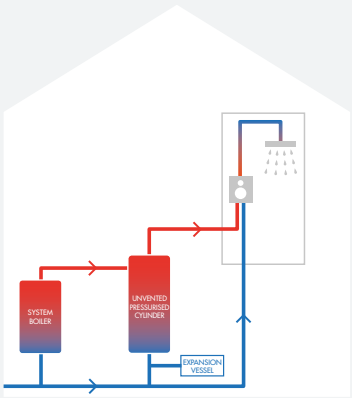
Pump Assisted

High Pressure - MP - HP (1.5 - 3Bar Plus)

- Booster pump installed

When the gravity of water exceeds 0.61pm, this is known as 'Positive Head' (i.e. when a shower head is positioned below the cold water storage tank). In this situation a standard, or Positive Head, shower pump can be used. Please note, this is with the exception of our Select valves and mixers. These require a Universal pump to be installed.

A 'Negative Head' condition is when the gravity of water is less than 0.61pm (i.e. when a shower head is positioned above the cold water storage tank, e.g. in a loft conversion). In these conditions a universal head pump must be used. Please note, a Universal shower pump will work in both positive and universal head conditions.(i.e. where the shower head is either above or below the cold water storage tank). The correct pump will allow you to use any of the products featured in this brochure.



Mains High Pressure

High Pressure - HP (1.5 - 3Bar)

- Unvented cylinder with an expansion cylinder
- No cold water storage tank in the loft
- Stored hot water
- Balanced Pressure
- Limited to Mains Pressure
