Athenaeum

Defined as a meeting place for scholars and creatives, Athenaeum pays homage to those historic places of learning, and celebrates the exchange of ideas and the pursuit of knowledge.

Entomology

Biblioteca

Meaning "library" in several languages, Biblioteca features a textured mylar base. Celebrating academia, the rich leather tones and metallic highlights of the book spines, paired with the moody shelving backdrop, create a realistic yet sumptuous aesthetic.

Entomology

A word used to describe the study of insects; Entomology has a vintage aesthetic featuring a parchment-like background with a delicate champagne shimmer across an array of arthropods. The metallic glimmer captures the iridescence often seen in the insect world

Plumaris

Meaning "embroidery" in Latin, and also the name of several plant species, Plumarius depicts a mid-scale leaf pattern formed from delicately detailed, twinkling stitches

Chesterfield

The Chesterfield sofa originated in 18th-century Britain, with its creation attributed to the Earl of Chesterfield. Featuring the now iconic button detailing and leather finishes, the style became associated with luxury and sophistication in high society.

Maris

Meaning "of the sea," Maris is a dynamic design that captures the synchronised energy of shoals of fish moving together as one.

Artemis

Named after the Greek god of the hunt, Artemis showcases bold, strong birds in a mesmerising dance of flight, enhanced by a mottled metallic texture of copper and gold.
