Underground

by SIMON ATTARD

The Underground Collection by designer Simon Attard takes inspiration from graffiti and the street art of 1970's New York, where artists would tag trains, letting the subway carry their work throughout the city.

The Underground Collection was inspired by this movement, to create designs that originated from the street, and to sit within the commercial and workspace environment. Graffiti by default, especially in the 1970's was associated with crime, as too were the streets with danger and pollution.

Designs ordinarily associated with counter culture and misguidance, are instantly subverted by their composition being that of recycled yarns, associated with the sustainability ethos of the 21st Century.

This cool collection of 3 print designs in 5 colourways features DOWNTOWN and WALL, showcasing scale and street graphics, while RHYTHM is motif based and improvised, all expressed in combinations of monochrome with earthly neutrals and neon pop.

By printing Underground on our new recycled upholstery basecloth, ECO TWILL™ made from plastic bottles, we have fused together these elements to create a context and dialogue with sustainability, textile design and the subculture of Graffiti.
